General comment:

This is postseason ball. Your run game has to be big no matter what. The teams that run the ball the best are efficient and have a chance at winning. Le'Veon [Bell] is the best at what he does and he made us right a lot of those times, too.

The past few months, you guys have been basically daring teams to stop your run, and it's still working. What's been the difference?

It's just the execution of it. Le'Veon [Bell] has made us right. He's been a guy that wants it. Everybody asks, 'is it too much? Is it too much for him to handle?' And he loves it. He dwells in it. That's what he wants. It's just exciting. Let's keep it going. Pull him out when he needs to be pulled, but as long as he wants it, let's continue to get him the ball.

How much does [Antonio Brown] making a couple of big plays early open up the running game?

[There is] no doubt, no doubt about it. It brings them outside of the box. And that's when the run game comes. A.B. is dynamic. We know what he does. We know how he plays and how hard he works. I'm just excited that we have him on our team.
